whatever you wanna call it is bad news. This info was gleaned from hpHosts. To top it all off they could not find server IP or a host name. This little  came up 4 times in one scan, I scan every day so it sorta like a svchost.exe one would find in task manager self replicating but for different and I might say, useful purposes. But that is what it seems this one the .207 thing does exopt maliciously.

 Rating: Bad shopping experience webbug tracking service tracking urls deliberately designed to look like local private IP ranges eg. 192.168.112.207.net to socially engineer the user into allowing the access through a firewall
